TOLSTOI'S OPERA.

Wrote the Libretto of An Opera Designed to Cure Peasants of Drink. LONDON, Aug. 18.—In theatrical circles here popular farces and music hall attractions are doing good business, but regular theatrical attractions are few in number.

Lady Henry Somerset's attack upon the so-called "living pictures," has spread the craze for that sort of thing, and tableaux vivants of all descriptions and of the most unblushing nature are to be seen even in the suburban halls.

Tolstoi has written an operatic libretto with a moral entitled "The Distiller," the object being to cure the Russian peasant of his fondness for vodka and other forms of ardent spirits. Madame Scrova set the words to music but it has failed in its object from a simple cause. The Russian mujik does not spend his time at the opera.

CHINESE DRIVEN OFF.

Another Battle in Which Japs Were Probably Beaten.

Newspapers Prosecuted for Giving Account of Naval Battle.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 18.—According to the last Oriental news by the steamer Empress of Japan, the third battle in the war between Japan and China was fought on July 29 at Selkan. The battle commenced at 3 o'clock in the morning and lasted with fearful slaughter a few hours. The Japanese eventually drove off the Chinese and captured the town of Selkan. There were 5,000 Japanese and 6,000 Chinese engaged.

The Chinese fled and took shelter on a number of ships at Oshu 15 miles distant. A number of canoes were captured by the Japanese. The Japanese followed them and another was fought at Asan, seven miles from Selkan. Of this battle no word can be received.

It is thought that the Japanese were defeated as they have closed the post-office, inspected the telegraph office and forbidden the papers to publish news.

There has been a naval engagement near Jenhaun, but both nations have suppressed news of the battle. It is known that a number of warships were engaged on both sides. The Chinese papers claim victory and say that news is kept back so as not to interfere with secret movement of the Chinese fleet.

The department of war is prosecuting all newspapers that give an account of the last naval battle.

A plan of action by County Commissioner Lecocq, of Douglas county, meets with general favor.
